Che de Tribune. " ENORE GRASS " ENORE 230 🕾

How shall the original fentle soils be restored, is the great problem which it is our duty to solve. It can be solved by introducing a proper sung most of the flour.

"O dear," said Bob; "I wish I had started grass and less grain. Our salvation consists in the practical recognition of the old Belgian proverb: 'No grass, no cattle; no cattle, no cast ure; no manure, no crops.' A district of count, which is exclusively or mainly a grass-growing section has we him uself all the elements of successful agriculture, provided its operations are conduct. ed with system and economy. A country having a soil naturally adapted to grass is in a great measure, able to live within itself, and not be dependent upon an exchange of commodities with other custricts. Upon such a soil as this the farmer has at hand the means to secure whatever he detires; or, to apply the proverb already sucted, he has corn, cattle, and manure. In fact, grass and stock husbandry is almost the only branch of farming which seems to render man more undependent.

The preservation of the entitity of our soils. and the profitable and increased production of the ce cals can less be secured by growing grass extensively. The question has been asked why it is that France, which has three acres to one under cultivation when compared with England, stroduces in the angregate no more than the atter? It is accounted for in this way: Every some c English train and receives the manure from three acres o grass, while in France the manure from each acre of grass mast be diffused over two acce a sal acres of gram. Such a system a is accorded in an land is in accordance with Nature's awa, and it is the one which must events ally be accepted by intelligent American armers. Such a system constitutes good to large, and there is no more fimit to the carability of the rie's trainie ance that stretc's away in a most enc ess pers sective than there is to the at muswhich exist in the atmosphere, in the ocean, and in the solid earth. Mr. Gerald De Coursey died very suddenly. at his residence, in this town, on Monday evening last, of hemorrhage of the throat. The core ial and universal esteem with which he was regarded, and the prominent position he held, tender something more than a passing notice of the man pertinent and proper.

He was born in the city of Philadelphia, on the eve of Christmas, 1834, and was consequently about 41 years old at his death. At no early age he became connected with the importing house of the Coursey, Lafourcade & Co -the oldest house of the kind in Priladelphia. He held the position till October, 1872, when he came to Colorado Springs as Secretary and Treasurer of the Colorado Springs Comany, and secretary of the National Land Imrosement Compacy - From that time till within a day or two of his Heath he was one of the most value I and efficient officers of the Colony Company oldeed, it will be difficult to a month ago, they certain y are making up make good the vicinity crused by his death, As a business man by believed in order and method. There is a larger breact's o' corn snowing in e country than there has been for a number of years, much of it is late, yet generally booking well, and by proper attention good crops may be expected. The plows should be cept busy through this month. Irrigation will not be necessary until it begins to "shoot," at which time every one should be reacy with a bountful supply of water and use it not sparingly, should we not have rains. The fruits of the gardener's early Spring labor are generally gone; from the later panting we trust fair crops may be realized. There are scarce y any of our people so energetic ant inlustra us as the gardeners, and in their severe losses this season they have the sym mathy of all the people. As far as I can learn the cattle have not all been collected by a considerable number, although the "roum upe" have been condu ted more systematically and intelligently than ever before. I suppose they have scattered more than common and that many c them will yet be found. Sheep are doing well, and wool growers are generally satisfied with the situation.
